- The use of IT and various software packages is widespread and will involve accurate communications and effective time management.
- Commercial awareness and being able to see the “wood for the trees” would be an asset.
- The role requires sound communication skills and good organisational abilities and would suit an individual who enjoys engaging with clients who need a safe pair of hands.

- The candidate will need to be able to build trust and relationships with a range of customers from first time freelancers through to established IT contractors.

- It is not essential to hold formal qualifications in either accounting (AAT/ACCA/ICAEW) or taxation (ATT/CTA) but it is preferred. Candidates may also be qualified by experience, which can be invaluable. Support for further qualification is available when appropriate.

This role would ultimately suit an individual who is driven, ambitious and who wants to develop their accountancy career and take responsibility for their own portfolio of clients at the earliest opportunity whilst gaining considerable commercial experience to freelancer and consultancy businesses across the UK.
